I looked at the tracks I'd used for this audio to see how many views they had on YouTube.

I was interested by the fact that the children's nursery sing along song had been viewed by over 56 million people!! and only uploaded 2 years ago

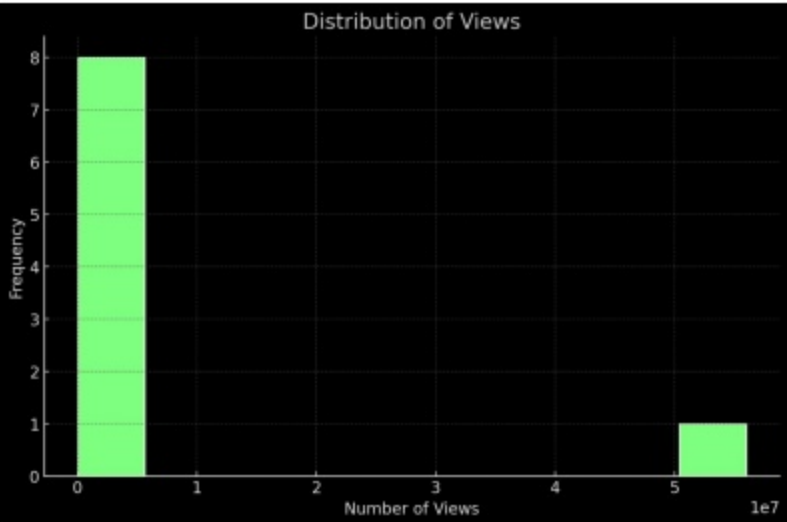

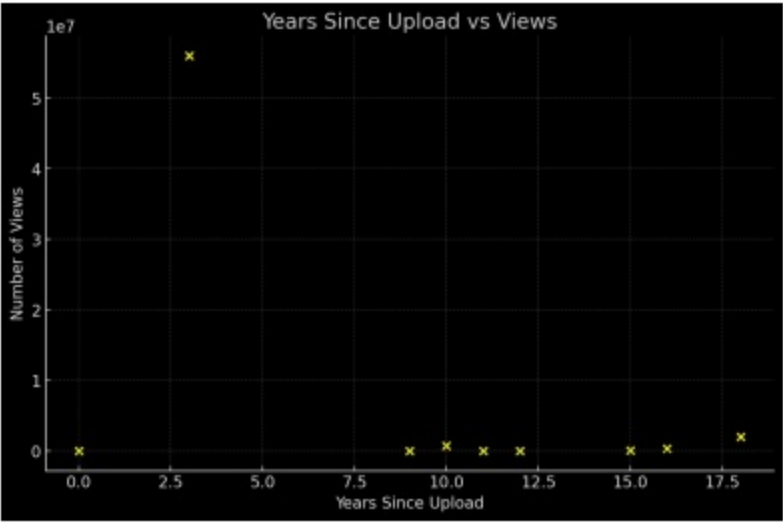

Jean Michel Jarre came a distant second. With 2m views but had been there for much longer.

The recent remix of Sputnik only had 2 views and I think I was the other view too.

I/O MULTI MEDIA ART RESEARCH:

I created a basic spread sheet with the data collected and asked Chat GTP to summarise explain trends and to visulise the results

I ASKED CHAT GTP TO MAKE A GRAPHIC USING THE TITLES OF THE TRACKS ON THE AUDIO AND IT GENERATED COMPLETE NONE SENSE THAT HAD NO REFERENCES TO TRACKS

Here are the key trends and insights from the data:

1. Correlation between Years Since Upload and Views:

There is a moderate negative correlation of approximately -0.46 between the years since upload and the number of views. This suggests that older tracks may tend to have fewer views, though the relationship is not very strong.

2. Descriptive Statistics for Views:

- Mean Views: The average number of views is approximately 6.57 million.
- Median Views: The median is around 76,000 views, indicating a skew towards tracks with fewer views.
- Maximum Views: The highest view count is 56 million.
- Minimum Views: The lowest view count is only 2 views, which might represent an outlier.

3. Top View Counts:

The distribution of views shows that the highest views are at 56 million, followed by other tracks with significant views like 2 million, 747,000, and others with smaller numbers.

These trends suggest that while there are some tracks with massive viewership, the majority have relatively moderate views, and older tracks tend to have fewer views on average. The data shows a diverse range of view counts, with some outliers at both ends.
